

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE
CORPORATION, as Receiver for INDYMAC
BANK, F.S.B.,

Plaintiff,

vs.

STEVEN C. SIMON; SHERRI R. SPEIGHTS,

Defendants.

Case No. 2:11-cv-01001-GMN-GWF

PROTECTIVE ORDER
GOVERNING CONFIDENTIALITY
OF DOCUMENTS

The parties submitted a Stipulation and Proposed Protective Order (#13) which the Court reviewed and entered. This order modifies the parties' stipulated protective order with respect to any documents filed or submitted with any dispositive motions filed in this case, and with respect to any documents the parties seek to maintain as confidential for purposes of identification in the joint pretrial order.

The Court has approved the parties' blanket protective order to facilitate the parties' discovery exchanges. However, the parties have not made an individualized showing that a protective order is necessary to protect their secret or other confidential information or established that disclosure would cause an identifiable, significant harm. The Ninth Circuit has recently examined the presumption of public access to judicial files and records and held that parties seeking to maintain the secrecy of documents attached to dispositive motions must show compelling reasons sufficient to overcome the presumption of public access. See, Kamakana v. City and County of Honolulu, 447 F.3d 1172, 1180 (9th Cir. 2006). Accordingly, the Court has approved the parties' stipulation but will require that any party seeking to seal attachments to a motion for summary

1 judgment or other dispositive motion or documents identified in the joint pretrial order shall be 2 required to seek further leave of Court.

3       A.     Protective Orders

4 Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c) permits the court in which an action is pending to “make any order 5 which justice requires to protect the party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression or 6 undue burden or expense” upon motion by a party or a person from whom discovery is sought. The 7 burden of persuasion under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c) is on the party seeking the protective order.
 8 Cipollone v. Liggett Group, Inc., 785 F.2d 1108, 1121 (3d Cir. 1986). To meet that burden of 9 persuasion, the party seeking the protective order must show good cause by demonstrating a 10 particular need for the protection sought. Beckman Indus., Inc., v. Int'l. Ins. Co., 966 F.2d 470, 476 11 (9th Cir. 1992). Rule 26(c) requires more than “broad allegations of harm, unsubstantiated by 12 specific examples or articulated reasoning.” Id., citing Cipollone v. Liggett. “A party asserting 13 good cause bears the burden, for each particular document it seeks to protect, of showing that 14 prejudice or harm will result if no protective order is granted.” Foltz v. State Farm, 331 F.3d 1122, 15 1130 (9th Cir. 2003), citing San Jose Mercury News, Inc., v. District Court, 187 F.3d 1096, 1102
 16 (9th Cir. 1999).

17       In Seattle Times Co. v. Rhinehart, the Supreme Court interpreted the language of Fed. R.
 18 Civ. P. 26(c) conferring “broad discretion on the trial court to decide when a protective order is 19 appropriate and what degree of protection is required.” 467 U.S. 20, 36 (1984). The Supreme Court 20 acknowledged that the “trial court is in the best position to weigh fairly the competing needs and 21 interests of the parties affected by discovery. The unique character of the discovery process requires 22 that the trial court have substantial latitude to fashion protective orders.” Id. Although the trial 23 court has broad discretion in fashioning protective orders, the Supreme Court has also recognized “a 24 general right to inspect and copy public records and documents, including judicial records and 25 documents.” Nixon v. Warner Communications, 435 U.S. 589, 597 (1978). However, the common 26 law right to inspect and copy judicial records is not absolute. Id. Thus, the Supreme Court 27 concluded, “[e]very court has supervisory power of its own records and files, and access has been 28 denied where the court files might have become a vehicle for improper purposes.” Id.

1           B.       The Presumption of Public Access

2       Unless court records are of the type “traditionally kept secret” the Ninth Circuit recognizes a 3       “strong presumption in favor of access.” Foltz v. State Farm Mutual Auto Insurance Company, 331
 4       F.3d 1122, 1135 (citing Hagestad v. Tragesser, 49 F.3d 1430, 1434 (9th Cir. 1995)). Grand jury 5       transcripts and warrant materials involved in pre-indictment investigations are two categories of 6       documents and records which have “traditionally been kept secret for important policy reasons.”
 7       Times Mirror Co. v. United States, 873 F.2d 1210, 1219 (9th Cir. 1989). Although the federal 8       common law right of access exists, it “does not mandate disclosure in all cases.” San Jose Mercury
 9       News, Inc., 187 F.3d at 1102. The strong presumption in favor of public access recognized by the 10      Ninth Circuit “can be overcome by sufficiently important countervailing interests.” Id.

11           1.       Pretrial Discovery

12       In the Ninth Circuit, “[i]t is well-established that the fruits of pretrial discovery are, in the 13       absence of a court order to the contrary, presumptively public.” San Jose Mercury News v. United 14       States District Court, 187 F.3d 1096, 1103 (9th Cir. 1999). Thus, the Ninth Circuit concluded, 15       “[g]enerally, the public can gain access to litigation documents and information produced during 16       discovery unless the party opposing disclosure shows ‘good cause’ why a protective order is 17       necessary.” Phillips v. General Motors, 307 F.3d 1206, 1210 (9th Cir. 2002). “For good cause to 18       exist, the party seeking protection bears the burden of showing specific prejudice or harm will result 19       if no protective order is granted.” Id. at 1210-11. Or, as the Ninth Circuit articulated the standard in 20       Foltz, “[t]he burden is on the party requesting a protective order to demonstrate that (1) the material
 21       in question is a trade secret or other confidential information within the scope of Rule 26(c) and (2)
 22       disclosure would cause an identifiable, significant harm.” Foltz at 1131, quoting Deford v. Schmid
 23       Prods. Co., 120 F.R.D. 648, 653 (D. Md. 1987). “If a court finds particularized harm will result 24       from disclosure of information to the public, then it balances the public and private interests to 25       decide whether a protective order is necessary.” Id. at 1211 (citing Glenmede Trust Co. v.
 26       Thompson, 56 F.3d 476, 483 (3d Cir. 1995)).

27           2.       Sealed Discovery Documents

28       In Phillips, the Ninth Circuit carved out an exception to the presumption of public access,

1 holding that the presumption does not apply to materials filed with the court under seal subject to a 2 valid protective order. 307 F.3d at 1213. The Phillips decision relied on the Seattle Times decision 3 in concluding that protective orders restricting disclosure of discovery materials which are not 4 admitted in evidence do not violate the public right of access to traditionally public sources of 5 information. Id. at 1213 (quoting, Seattle Times, 467 U.S. at 33. The Ninth Circuit reasoned that 6 the presumption of public access was rebutted because a district court had already determined that 7 good cause existed to protect the information from public disclosure by balancing the need for 8 discovery against the need for confidentiality in issuing the protective order. Id. Therefore, “when a 9 party attaches a sealed discovery document to a non-dispositive motion, the usual presumption of 10 the public’s right of access is rebutted.”

11 3. Materials Attached to Dispositive Motions

12 The Ninth Circuit recently and comprehensively examined the presumption of public access 13 to judicial files and records in Kamakana v. City and County of Honolulu, 447 F.3d 1172 (9th Cir.
 14 2006). There, the court recognized that different interests are at stake in preserving the secrecy of 15 materials produced during discovery and materials attached to dispositive motions. Citing Phillips
 16 and Foltz, the Kamakana decision reiterated that a protective order issued under the Rule 26(c) may 17 be issued once a particularized showing of good cause exists for preserving the secrecy of discovery 18 materials. “Rule 26(c) gives the district court much flexibility in balancing and protecting the 19 interests of private parties.” 447 F.3d at 1180. The Kamakana court, therefore, held that a “good 20 cause” showing is sufficient to seal documents produced in discovery. Id.

21 However, the Kamakana decision also held that a showing of “compelling reasons” is 22 needed to support the secrecy of documents attached to dispositive motions. A showing of “good 23 cause” does not,
 24 without more, satisfy the “compelling reasons” test required to maintain the secrecy of documents 25 attached to dispositive motions. Id. The court found that:

26 Different interests are at stake with the right of access than with 27 Rule 26(c); with the former, the private interests of the litigants are 28 not the only weights on the scale. Unlike private materials unearthed during discovery, judicial records are public documents almost by definition, and the public is entitled to access by default. (Citation

1 omitted). This fact sharply tips the balance in favor of production
2 when a document formally sealed for good cause under Rule 26(c)
3 becomes part of the judicial record. Thus, a “good cause” showing 4 alone will not suffice to fulfill the “compelling reasons” standard that a party must meet to rebut the presumption of access to dispositive pleadings and attachments.

5 Id. Kamakana recognized that “compelling reasons” sufficient to outweigh the public’s interests in 6 disclosure and justify sealing records exist when court records may be used to gratify private spite, 7 permit public scandal, circulate libelous statements, or release trade secrets. Id. at 1179 (internal 8 quotations omitted). However, “[t]he mere fact that the production of records may lead to a 9 litigant’s embarrassment, incrimination, or exposure to further litigation will not, without more, 10 compel the court to seal its records.” Id., citing, Foltz, 331 F.3d at 1136. To justify sealing 11 documents attached to dispositive motions, a party is required to present articulable facts identifying 12 the interests favoring continuing secrecy and show that these specific interests overcome the 13 presumption of public access by outweighing the public’s interests in understanding the judicial 14 process. Id. at 1181 (internal citations and quotations omitted).

15 For all of the foregoing reasons,

16 IT IS ORDERED:

17 1. No documents which are filed with the court as attachments to a summary judgment 18 or other dispositive motion, or documents which are identified in the joint pretrial order, may be 19 filed under seal unless the proponent seeking protected status of the document(s) establishes 20 “compelling reasons” to rebut the presumption of public access.

21 2. Any party seeking to seal attachments to a motion for summary judgment or other 22 dispositive motion filed with the court, or documents which are identified in the joint pretrial order, 23 shall submit a separate memorandum of points and authorities which presents articulable facts 24 identifying the interests favoring continuing the secrecy of the attachments, and shows that these 25 specific interests outweigh the public’s interests in disclosure sufficient to overcome the 26 presumption of public access to dispositive pleadings and attachments.

27 3. Any application to seal documents attached to a motion for summary judgment or 28 other dispositive motion, or documents identified in the joint pretrial order, shall be served on

1 opposing counsel together with the documents proposed to be filed under seal. Opposing counsel
2 shall have fifteen (15) days from service of any application to seal documents attached to a motion
3 for summary judgment or other dispositive motion, or documents identified in the joint pretrial 4 order, in which to file a response.

5 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that in regard to discovery and other non-dispositive 6 motions, only those portions of the motion, response or reply pleadings which contain specific 7 reference to the contents of confidential documents or information, and the exhibits which contain 8 such confidential information, shall be filed under seal. The remainder of the pleading and other 9 exhibits, which do not contain confidential information, shall be filed as publicly accessible 10 documents unless otherwise specifically ordered by the court.

11 DATED this 5th day of August, 2011.
